Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election with traverse of claims 1-22 in the reply filed on 8/8/2007 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that it could be amended. This is not found persuasive because no amendment was made.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Drugstore.com dated October 13, 1999, and further in view of Lefeber (US Patent Application Publication 2002/0046299 A1).

Re Claim 1: Drugstore discloses a central server including a database of at least one consumer profile identifying a consumer and at least one commodity good for usage tracking and replenishment with use information therefor (see Page 8); and an evaluator for periodically determining from the use information a remaining inventory amount of the at least one commodity good, such that upon determining a low inventory for the at least one commodity good may exist, a reorder reminder message communicates via the messaging transceiver to the consumer (see Page 8).

Lefebber discloses a messaging transceiver for receiving and transmitting messages between the central server and the consumer and selectively operated by the central server and by the consumer (see Abstract and Figures 1 and 2); wherein the consumer return communicates the unchanged reorder reminder message via the messaging transceiver to the central server to effect the reorder (see Abstract and Figures 1 and 2). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Drugstore's invention with Lefebber's use of a messaging transceiver and the communication of the unchanged reorder reminder message in order to provide a convenience for the customer of not having to remember to order refills or other commodities as well as communicating wireline or wireless.

Re Claims 2-3, 7: Lefebber discloses wherein the messaging transceiver comprises an electronic mail device (see Figure 2). Lefebber discloses wherein the messaging transceiver is a PDA device (see Page 1, Para 0005, line 4 and Figure 2). Lefebber discloses wherein the modification means comprises an interactive communications device capable of receiving an instruction from the consumer to effect a change in the reorder reminder message (see Figure 2). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Drugstore's invention with Lefebber's use of a e-mail, PDAs, and a modification means in order to provide a convenience for the customer of not having to remember to order refills or other commodities as well as communicating wireline or wireless.

Re Claim 4: Drugstore discloses wherein the use information includes for each commodity good to be tracked a prior order number date, a prior order number quantity, and a usage rate, whereby the evaluator can determine whether the low inventory may exist (see Page 8).

Re Claim 5: Drugstore discloses further comprising a warehouse for obtaining the commodity goods for shipment to the consumer responding to the re-order reminder message (see Page 8).

Re Claim 6: Drugstore discloses further comprising modification means for the consumer to modify the reorder reminder message prior to the selective return communication of the reorder reminder message (see Page 8).

Re Claim 8: Drugstore discloses wherein the instruction effects the addition of an unlisted commodity good (see Page 8).

Re Claim 10: Drugstore discloses wherein the instruction effects a change in the amount of the commodity goods ordered (see Page 8).

Re Claim 11: Drugstore discloses wherein the instruction adds a commodity good to be tracked by the central processor for a subsequent reorder reminder message (see Page 8).

4. Claim 9 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the combination of Drugstore and Lefeber, and further in view of Rosenberg et al (US Patent 6,418,416 B1).

Re Claim 9: Rosenberg discloses wherein the instruction effects a change in the minimum inventory for the commodity goods (see Col 6, line 21). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have provided the combination of Drugstore and Lefeber with apparatus and method of Rosenberg to enable the instruction effects a change in the minimum inventory for the commodity goods. In that regard, the inventory levels would be maintained as necessary to provide commodity products to customers - with no delays resulting from an out of stock condition and thereby forcing the customer to go elsewhere. Moreover, this inventory technique will ensure that minimum inventory levels are maintained and commodity products available for customer and in that manner increase their satisfaction as well increasing the probability of additional sales.
